PREFACE

Dear Students,

In this activity book, there are activities at various levels and structures that will allow you to use the knowledge and skills you have gained during the teaching processes. With these activities, you will have the opportunity to both revise the subjects you have studied at school and monitor your academic progress. The activities in this activity book prepared for this purpose were structured to include cognitive domain steps.

In the activity book, besides gap filling, matching, multiple-choice, open-ended, short-answer item type activities, there are some other activities which allow you to have a pleasant time with content such as crossword, wordsearch puzzles, skill-based activity, structured grid, and fun time activities. Also, in the "Do I remember?" section, you will be able to self-evaluate academically and you will have the opportunity to revise the missing topics through the data matrix.

We aim to contribute to your academic development with this activity book, which has been meticulously prepared by experts in the field. Hope to see the positive reflections of this study in your education life.

Do I remember?

How much do you remember? Tick the correct option for you. Add up your points and evaluate your performance according to the scale.

1

When we specify the person or group of individuals we're talking about or give extra information, we use who at the beginning of a relative clause.

B Read the text and write questions to the answers given below using the clues.

WHO YOUR TRUE FRIENDS ARE ...

First, think about what a friend means to you. Is s/he someone you have never met in real life but who accepts your friend request online or a person you have known since childhood and kept in touch with all these years? Whether online or with real friends, we would like to be connected wherever we are nowadays. We use social media to share photos, videos, and status updates with our friends and family. The number of people who follow you on social media has become the norm. Does having tons of social media friends mean you are in friendship in the real world?

Technology and social media have changed the meaning of friendship in our lives, we have more friends than ever, but we also feel more alone. Although social media and other technology make it easier to find, connect with friends, and keep them, is it so easy to build friendships built on honesty, trust, empathy, and vulnerability in an online world full of fake facts and trolls? People do not think the internet is making them less social. Instead, most people think it is giving new ways to communicate and interact with the rest of the world that hasn't been possible at any other time.

Though such conflicts and paradoxes are renowned among generation Z, they are still unaware of the overload of impersonal interactions and fewer face-to-face conversations. According to some studies, a person establishes the importance of being included in social circles during adolescence, which is critical for developing their identity and determining values and opinions about others and the world. Do you think it is enough to identify those circles using digital skills?

Actually, we must not ignore a general disadvantage. We believe in the ancient saying that "Books and friends should be few but good," however, what we see online is an entirely different reality. These youth often seek out numerous friendships, sacrificing quality in favour of number.

In a nutshell, it's hard to be human without face-to-face relationships with other people because friends touch our hearts, minds, and imaginations in many ways, but not with numbers ...

1. What _____ the technology and social media _____?
They have changed the meaning of friendship in our lives.
